P. 9, lines 2 to 4. Columpniantur, &c. This refers to the checking of the account, on the giving in of which it seems that some items were not satisfactory; against these crosses were put, and their amount was not to be paid till the opinion of the Treasurer (probably of the Royal Household) was taken upon them. The payments that follow shew that they were all discharged.

Line 10. Contra-rotulus expensarum, &c. Here commences the second membrane, which is not in the same hand, but is written by an English scribe. The entries relate only to the ordinary household expenses.

P. 10, line 4. Thoma, Henrico, &c. Membrane 3 begins here, written in the same foreign hand as the first.

Line 17. Lockthorck; Loughborough, Leicester.

Line 25. Cantonibus; chastons or chausetons; breeches worn over mail armour. A diminutive of chausses.—Meyrick. In the roll of purchases for the tournament at Windsor, 6 Edw. I. is a payment for "lxxvj. par' chaston."—Archæologia, xvii. p. 297. See postea, p. 15.

Line 26. Tribus paribus fulcrum; three pairs of studs or bosses for horse-gear.

Line 29. Borellis in hastiludio; blunt spears for a hastilude. In the thirteenth century a harmless kind of tournament was practised for acquiring address and proving strength, in which mock lances called "bonhoury," were used.—Meyrick, i. 125.

Kynedourde; Kenilworth?

Line 32. Peramenta; pouches or small bags.

P. 11, line 12. Kynemarscoursde; Kensworth, Herts?

Line 28. Wemelee; Wimley, Herts.

P. 12, line 3. Cenlee; Chelsea?

Line 14. Rotulus expensarum, &c. Membrane 4. It is in the same hand as mem. 2.

Line 19. Tuttelebers; Tutbury, Stafford.

Line 30. Merton; Merston, Bucks?

P. 13, line 7. Tele Dailisham; cloth of Aylesham, Norfolk.

Line 18. Corigiis; girdles.

Line 27. Belabris; double-mouthed sacks, or, as it is expressed, "double-lipped." See Du Cange, s. v. Bisaccia. A MS. 44 Edw. III. shews them to have been used for carrying treasure, and that they then had locks.

P. 14, line 26. Cindone; sindon, a kind of cloth.—See Du Cange, s. v.

Line 30. Testeries; testierew, head-pieces fixed on the horse's head between the ears, in which a crest was put.—Meyrick. See postea, p. 15. Piceries; a portion of horse-armour not assigned in Meyrick. In the Inventory of Louis le Hutin dated 1316, there printed, occur "Item, picieres et flanchieres de samit des armes le roy."

P. 15, line 1. Battura; a metal composition, chiefly copper, used for ornamental purposes. It is a very early instance of its use. See article on "The use of Tin in Girdles," in Journal of Archaeological Institute, No. xxv. (October, 1852), p. 281.

INTRODUCTION.

THE MS. Account of the Household Expenses of the Princess Elizabeth, during one year of her residence at Hatfield (viz. from October 1, 1551, to September 30, 1552), which is now communicated to the Camden Society, was given to me in the year 1827 by Mrs. Grace Barnes, the widow of the late William Barnes, Esq. of Redland Hall, near Bristol. It had been bought in by her for the sum of one hundred and fifty guineas at the sale of that gentleman's library, by Mr. Evans, in 1822. Of its previous history I am unable to say more than that it had been the property of Mr. Gustavus Brander; that at his decease it was purchased by Samuel Tyssen, Esq.; and that subsequently, through what intermediate channel I have not discovered, it came into the possession of Mr. Barnes. As it does not appear in the sale catalogue of Mr. Tyssen's library, it is possible that it may have come to Mr. Barnes by exchange for some other article in Mr. Barnes's collections.

Some account of the MS. is to be found in "The Antiquarian Repertory" (vol. i. p. 64), and in Nichols's "Progresses of Queen Elizabeth" (vol. i. p. vii.) It is in the original binding, and consists of twenty-six folio pages (size twenty-three inches by sixteen), each bearing the signature of the Princess, and counter-signed by Sir Walter Buckler, then her chamberlain. Beside an illuminated commencement, in gold and colours,* there are five pen-and-ink drawings, forming as many capital initial letters: which are designed in a very high style of (probably) Italian art. Of two of them fac-similes are introduced into this volume; the subject of one of which has completely baffled me, though I have sought for it in all the works on emblems, &c. to which I could procure access. On looking at the Latin hexameters (or what appear to be such) which accompany some of these drawings, it is to be feared that the princess did not very carefully retain the prosodial lessons which she must have received from Roger Ascham.

* The initial of "Thaccumpte" incloses a slip of a rose-bush, at the head of which is a red and white rose charged with the letter E, and at each side a bud: the slip standing on a green mound between two strawberries.

On one of the covers there appear these memoranda, in writing of the seventeenth century.

"Heere is remayning in this Booke of Velam thirteen leaves—1627." and beneath it, "Ex dono Dom. Gregorij Ballard, olim è Coll. D. Johannis Baptistæ LL. Baccalaurei, et Diocæsis Oxoniensis Registrarii, Ann. CIO DC LII."

There are two points in Elizabeth's character which derive no confirmation from these "Accompts"—her fondness for literature, and her passion for dress. Of books she seems to have made only two additions to her library, in 1551-2, one of which was a present; and her expenses for the wardrobe are on the most moderate scale. Of another trait, that of parsimony, for which she became subsequently so remarkable, I know not whether it be fair to infer its existence from the circumstance that she does not seem to have spent more, in twelve months, than 7*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* in "allmes to dyverse pore men and wemen at sondrie times." The only gift which this Account records is that of 70*l.* to "Mr. Edmond Bollen, her graces kynsman."

It is somewhat remarkable that she should so frequently appear as a vendor or purveyor to her brother the King of articles necessary for the maintenance of the royal household, such as beer, Gascony wine, wax candles, salt fish, "muttons," coal, and brushwood.
